

Gold Case to Show if Supreme Court Will Follow Election Returns

WASHINGTON — The decision of the Supreme Court on the gold clause— which the Capital breathlessly expects on Monday—probably will be based on two things.

One is Dr. Dooley's epigram to the effect that: "The Constitution follows the flag. The Supreme Court follows the election returns."

The other is the background, the traditions, the life experiences of the justices who sit upon the highest court in the land. Probe into their youths, the environment in which they developed, the type of law they practiced and you get a reasonably accurate gauge of how they lineup now.

Conservatives

Take, for instance, the outstanding member of the conservative group on the supreme bench.

As a lawyer, of twenty-five, WILLIS VAN DEVANTER, migrated from Marion, Indiana, to the Territory of Wyoming whose laws he vowed to frame, and whose vast virgin land he helped to open as an attorney for the Union Pacific Railroad.

It is not unnatural, therefore, that Van Devanter's opinions should be tinged with rugged individualism. He is a fervid opponent of any vestige of government control or regulation of industry. Once he wrote the famous opinion in the case of Pennsylvania vs. West Virginia by which the people of West Virginia sought, through the state legislature, to prevent the export of natural gas until their own needs had been met. Van Devanter ruled against them. He is now 75 years old.

JUSTICE GEORGE SUTHERLAND, 73, who usually is found on the same side as Van Devanter, also inherited his economic philosophy from the laissez-faire days of the pioneer West.

Born in England, Sutherland was taken by his parents to Utah, where he eventually aligned himself with the Mormon-Republican machine, was elected to the House, then the Senate.

As a Senator, Sutherland was known for his inoffensive good nature, his extreme conservatism, his unswerving party regularity and his friendship with Warren Harding, who rewarded him with appointment to the Supreme Court after Senator King defeated him.

On the Court, Sutherland has become famous for his opinion blocking the minimum wage, the child labor law, the Oklahoma ice law, and every other piece of legislation which the New Deal now stands for.

JAMES CLARK McREYNOLDS, 73, is the son of a small town Kentucky doctor, who migrated to Tennessee. There his son came to know McAdoo, who came from that state and who recommended him as Attorney General, when Woodrow Wilson at the last moment had rejected Brandeis for that post.

Having discovered that McReynolds was nothing more than a fundamentalist small-town lawyer, Wilson got rid of him by promotion to the Supreme Court, where, ever since he has been the Court's most energetic fighter against workmen's compensation and other forms of social insurance now proposed by President Roosevelt. He will always be remembered for checking the use of the Mann Act for blackmail purposes and for his undisguised rudeness to liberal members of the Court.

PIERCE BUTLER, 69, is the son of Irish immigrants who settled in Minnesota when that state was in the heyday of its expansion and who made a fortune as legal champion for the railroads which traverse it.

Dictator Long Returns Home

Body-Guard Beats Photographer, Smashes Camera, As Huey Arrives in Station

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 1.—Flanked by a heavy bodyguard Senator Huey Long came back to his Louisiana realm today in typical dictator fashion.

Joe Messina, swart chief of Long's strong-arm squad and a half dozen henchmen badly beat a newspaper photographer and smashed his camera to bits as the senator, a grin on his heavy, cherubic face, stepped from a train here.

A handful of newspaper and train station hangers-on were the only ones there to greet Long as he arrived from Washington to stage his latest raid on the few remaining public officials who have stood against his political ambitions.

In the darkened station shed, as Huey, preceded by his guards stepped from the train, a flash bulb popped and Long stooped revealed in its radiance, a pudgy, mottled faced man dressed like a dandy.

BEATEN BY MESSINA

Messina, a 200-pounder, rushed the slender 125 pound Leon Trice, fists flailing.

"Put down that — thing," Long shouted.

Long was complacently walked up the platform, grinning, other bodyguards formed in a hollow square around him.

Messina slugged Trice in the face.

"Don't do that, Joe," Trice pleaded.

Messina hit him again, knocking his camera and flash bulb equipment to the ground, flash bulbs exploding like the pop of grenades. The onlookers milled around eager to see the show.

Other bodyguards rushed up and joined in the fray. Trice was badly beaten in the mouth and head. His mouth bled freely. None came to his aid. City policemen in the station ignored the incident.

Trying to protect himself, Trice picked up his mangled camera and struck Messina over the head. Messina struck out viciously knocking Trice to the ground. Another guard rushed over, picked up the remains of the camera and dashed it to pieces against the wheel of a train car.

SOVIET DEBT TALK AT END

Moscow's Demands for Loan Result in Trade Relations Being Impaired

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Newly established American-Russian relations were seriously impaired today by the collapse of negotiations for settlement of the American debt and damage claims against the Communist regime.

Determined that not one penny of Uncle Sam's money will be used to finance trade with Soviet Russia so long as Moscow refuses to agree to a just settlement, the state department plans to seek dissolution of the federal export-import bank for Russia.

Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, chairman of the bank, will propose its dissolution at a meeting of the board of directors to be held shortly.

The bank was formed with $11,000,000 capital to help, finance the development of trade with the Soviets. Its functioning, however, was contingent upon a settlement of the debt issue.

Collapse of the negotiations was due to Moscow's persistent efforts to induce this government to loan it $2 for every $1 it agreed to pay back on the debt and damage claims.

KILLERS TO DIE IN 'CHAIR' SATURDAY

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 1.—The two hard boiled killers, awaiting death in Virginia's electric chair, here tomorrow—pasty faced Robert Mais, and stolid, broken legged Walter Legenza—have "got religion."

At 7:30 this morning they had 24 hours to live, and they were singing psalms.

These were the "tough guys" who told Virginia authorities a week or so ago to hurry up and get it over with. These were the two who said they'd never crack as the shadow of the "hot seat" darkened their earthy eyes. These were the men, too, who told police boastfully, that they'd "killed plenty."

Tomorrow they must die for the murder of E. M. Hubbard, federal reserve bank truck driver.

2 PRISONERS GET PAROLE HEARINGS

Two Pickaway-co. prisoners in the Mansfield reformatory will receive parole hearings March 1. They are Harry Sawyer, convicted in March, 1933 of burglary and larceny, and Leo Alexander convicted in March, 1934, for auto theft.

Sawyer has been serving a one to 15 year term while Alexander is serving one to 20 years.

'VET' OFFICER IS ON PENSION; STARTS TODAY

Thomas McManamy Retires After 32 Years of Service as Policeman

SALARY $50 MONTH

Chief Warner Says He Plans to Retire

Thomas McManamy, W. Ohio-st., a member of the city police department for 32 years, was in retirement today. Mr. McManamy is the first person to be retired under the city's new pension system.

His pension salary will be $50 a month, the same salary he has been receiving since he became day desk officer 13 months ago.

Mr. McManamy was notified Thursday evening by Councilman W. M. Reid, of the police pension board, that his retirement would become effective February 1.

Hereafter there will be no day desk officer, that job having been created for the veteran officer when he was taken off street duty. J. S. Baer, who has served in the fire department for many years, recently acting as fire inspector, will be the first member of that organization to be retired. Just when his retirement will become effective is not certain.

CHIEF TO RETIRE, TOO

Police Chief W. H. Warner, who announced Mr. McManamy's retirement, said that he, too, expects to retire as soon as he is certain all details of the system have been worked out so necessary funds will be ready for the retired officers.

Mr. Warner has been on the police force about 19 years, serving at different times. He has been chief for the past 11 years.

Chief Warner today discussed a possible successor to himself when he eventually retires. He said: "McCready is the proper man for the job from the standpoint of service. He would make a good chief, too. I also believe Fred Fitzpatrick should be given the day job if McCready does become chief."

The civil service commission of James McLaughlin, William Mason and Wade Cook will meet as soon as the age limit has been worked out, to obtain an eligible list from which to appoint the new chief.

Police and fireman's pension boards will meet Monday evening shortly after which time it is possible Mr. Baer and Mr. Warner will both be retired.

There is still considerable controversy over the age limit of new firemen and policemen. The pension boards are urging council to approve 24 and 35 years as the age limits, while members of the American Legion are attempting to have the upper age boosted to 40 to permit war veterans who might seek jobs to qualify. It is reported that a compromise of 38 years might be voted.

COMES UP WEDNESDAY

The question will come up before council next Wednesday evening when the ordinance is presented for its third reading. At present four councilmen favor 24 and 35 years, while three others are for 24 and 40.

A four to three vote will pass the ordinance at 24 and 35 but there is a possibility that Mayor W. B. Cady will not approve a 24-35 ordinance since he wants the age limit to be 24 and 40.

BANDITS ATTACK COAST STEAMER

HON KONG, Feb. 1.—The Chinese coastal steamer Tungchow, carrying among its passengers 73 American and British school children, was attacked by pirates off the coast of the Shantung peninsula today, naval authorities here announced.

The ship was bound for Chefoo to Weihaiwei, a distance of less than 50 miles, when it disappeared. Authorities here anxiously awaited further details of the pirate attack.

Dr. Townsend Declines To Submit To Questions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the mild-mannered California physician who has intrigued millions with his $200-a-month old age pension plan, declined today to submit to questioning by members of the House ways and means committee.

After briefly explaining his plan, Dr. Townsend said he had promised his physicians to avoid any "undue strain."

He asked that a statistician in his organization be substituted for him next week.

His brief appearance before the committee, which is considering the administration's economic security bill, disappointed 200 spectators. The audience included many members of congress.

"I have just left a sick bed in Johns Hopkins hospital (Baltimore) and I promised the physicians I would return in a few hours and avoid any undue strain," Dr. Townsend explained.

He is 68 years old, and troubled by abdominal ailments. He was treated with courtesy by committee members who have been bombarded by petitions to support his plan.

The physician issued a veiled warning to congress that he would become active on the political stump unless his plan is approved.

"It is only fair to state that the people are watching you and will act accordingly," said Dr. Townsend.

He assailed "brain trusters" and the "doctrine of scarcity."

The plane fell to earth at Podajuch while enroute to Berlin from Danzig.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 1.—Ernie Smith, veteran trans-Pacific flyer, and now a mail pilot for TWA, was unhurt when his plane crashed into high tension wires near the California national guard airport here and smashed into the bed of the Los Angeles river, it was reported today.

REILLY CLAIMS INTIMIDATION OF WITNESSES

Says Seven Have Been Visited by Two Men; Exonerates Wilentz

EXPERT IS CALLED

Asserts Kidnap Notes, Bruno's Writing Differ

By JAMES L. KILGALLAN

COURTROOM, Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann did not write the Lindbergh ransom notes, John M. Trendley of East St. Louis, Ill., the first of the defense handwriting experts, testified today at the trial of Hauptmann who is accused of murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Trendley, tall, scholarly-looking man of 67, a wizard in penmanship, was asked by Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel if he had studied all the evidence introduced by the state's array of handwriting experts. Trendley said he had.

"As a result of your examination of the ransom notes and the 'request' writing of Hauptmann are you able to give an opinion whether the defendant, Hauptmann, wrote the ransom notes," asked Reilly.

"I believe he did not," said Trendley, in a positive tone.

STUDIED TWO HOURS

Trendley said he studied the ransom notes for over two hours. He also had carefully examined specimens of Hauptmann's penmanship. He had studied the various charts the state had introduced in connection with the handwriting.

"I drew the witness' attention to charts prepared by Albert S. Osborn, dean of the American chirographical corps.

"I show you the ransom nursery note and call your attention to the 'd'. Do you find on Mr. Osborn's charts the 'd' which begins the note?"

Trendley got down from the stand and looked over the array of great black and white exhibits on the wall.

"I cannot find it here," he said. Reilly is agitated over alleged terrorizing of his witnesses. He said seven defense witnesses have been visited by two men, claiming to represent the state of New Jersey, and threatening them if they appear at the trial here. He was quick to add that he does not think Attorney General Wilentz knows anything about this matter.

The defense is concealing its plans. Reilly, however, indicates he has a number of "surprises" to spring. What these surprises are he declined to reveal.

The state did a great job in attacking the standing of three defense witnesses who supported Hauptmann's alibi that he was in New York—and not in New Jersey—the night of March 1, 1932, when the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

ALL ADMIT CLAIMS

One of these witnesses was a bootlegger, Attorney General David T. Wilentz brought out under cross-examination. Another once conducted a restaurant which was raided several times. The third admitted he had been arrested a number of times for such crimes as assault and battery and rape.

These witnesses were:

1.—Louis Kiss, of New York, a silk painter, formerly of Hungary. He swore he was in Frederickson's bakery in the Bronx on the night of the kidnapping and that Hauptmann came in leading a police dog, remarking that a man Continued On Page Eight

CHIEF TO RETIRE, TOO

Police Chief W. H. Warner, who announced Mr. McManamy's retirement, said that he, too, expects to retire as soon as he is certain all details of the system have been worked out so necessary funds will be ready for the retired officers.

Mr. Warner has been on the police force about 19 years, serving at different times. He has been chief for the past 11 years.

Chief Warner today discussed a possible successor to himself when he eventually retires. He said: "McCready is the proper man for the job from the standpoint of service. He would make a good chief, too. I also believe Fred Fitzpatrick should be given the day job if McCready does become chief."

The civil service commission of James McLaughlin, William Mason and Wade Cook will meet as soon as the age limit has been worked out, to obtain an eligible list from which to appoint the new chief.

Police and fireman's pension boards will meet Monday evening shortly after which time it is possible Mr. Baer and Mr. Warner will both be retired.

There is still considerable controversy over the age limit of new firemen and policemen. The pension boards are urging council to approve 24 and 35 years as the age limits, while members of the American Legion are attempting to have the upper age boosted to 40 to permit war veterans who might seek jobs to qualify. It is reported that a compromise to 38 years might be voted.

COMES UP WEDNESDAY

The question will come up before council next Wednesday evening when the ordinance is presented for its third reading. At present four councilmen favor 24 and 35 years, while three others are for 24 and 40.

A four to three vote will pass the ordinance at 24 and 35 but there is a possibility that Mayor W. B. Cady will not approve a 24-35 ordinance since he wants the age limit to be 24 and 40.

It was stated one Russian guard was shot. The children, pupils of the China inland mission schools at Chefoo, were apparently unharmed.

The ship was bound for Chefoo to Weihaiwei, a distance of less than 50 miles, when it disappeared. Authorities here anxiously awaited further details of the pirate attack.

Dr. Townsend Declines To Submit To Questions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the mild-mannered California physician who has intrigued millions with his $200-a-month old age pension plan, declined today to submit to questioning by members of the House ways and means committee.

After briefly explaining his plan, Dr. Townsend said he had promised his physicians to avoid any "undue strain."

He asked that a statistician in his organization be substituted for him next week.

His brief appearance before the committee, which is considering the administration's economic security bill, disappointed 200 spectators. The audience included many members of congress.

"I have just left a sick bed in Johns Hopkins hospital (Baltimore) and I promised the physicians I would return in a few hours and avoid any undue strain," Dr. Townsend explained.

He is 68 years old, and troubled by abdominal ailments. He was treated with courtesy by committee members who have been bombarded by petitions to support his plan.

The physician issued a veiled warning to congress that he would become active on the political stump unless his plan is approved.

"It is only fair to state that the people are watching you and will act accordingly," said Dr. Townsend.

He assailed "brain trusters" and the "doctrine of scarcity."

REILLY CLAIMS INTIMIDATION OF WITNESSES

Says Seven Have Been Visited by Two Men; Exonerates Wilentz

EXPERT IS CALLED

Asserts Kidnap Notes, Bruno's Writing Differ

By JAMES L. KILGALLAN
COURTROOM, Flemington, N. J., Feb. 1—Bruno Richard Hauptmann did not write the Lindbergh ransom notes, John M. Trendley of East St. Louis, Ill., the first of the defense handwriting experts, testified today at the trial of Hauptmann who is accused of murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Trendley, tall, scholarly-looking man of 67, a wizard in penmanship, was asked by Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel if he had studied all the evidence introduced by the state's array of handwriting experts. Trendley said he had.

"As a result of your examination of the ransom notes and the 'request' writing of Hauptmann are you able to give an opinion whether the defendant, Hauptmann, wrote the ransom notes," asked Reilly.

"I believe he did not," said Trendley, in a positive tone.

STUDIED TWO HOURS

Trendley said he studied the ransom notes for over two hours. He also had carefully examined specimens of Hauptmann's penmanship. He had studied the various charts the state had introduced in connection with the handwriting.

Reilly drew the witness' attention to charts prepared by Albert S. Osborn, dean of the state's chirographical corps.

"Q—I show you the ransom nursery note and call your attention to the 'd'. Do you find on Mr. Osborn's charts the 'd' which begins the note?"

Trendley got down from the stand and looked over the array of great black and white exhibits on the wall.

"I cannot find it here," he said. Reilly is agitated over alleged terrorizing of his witnesses. He said seven defense witnesses have been visited by two men, claiming to represent the state of New Jersey, and threatening them if they appear at the trial here. He was quick to add that he does not think Attorney General Wilentz knows anything about this matter.

The defense is concealing its plans. Reilly, however, indicates he has a number of "surprises" to spring. What these surprises are he declined to reveal.

The state did a great job in attacking the standing of three defense witnesses who supported Hauptmann's alibi that he was in New York—and not in New Jersey—the night of March 1, 1932, when the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped.

ALL ADMIT CLAIMS
One of these witnesses was a bootlegger, Attorney General David T. Wilentz brought out under cross-examination. Another once conducted a restaurant which was raided several times. The third admitted he had been arrested a number of times for such crimes as assault and battery and rape.

These witnesses were:
1—Louis Kiss, of New York, a silk painter, formerly of Hungary. He swore he was in Frederickson's bakery in the Bronx on the night of the kidnaping and that Hauptmann came in leading a police dog, "emarking that a man Continued On Page Eight bakers, and took the lead in overruling a Pennsylvania law protecting immigrants from unscrupulous steamship agents.

When Justice Holmes, handing down the majority opinion in the Virginia sterilization of imbeciles case, proclaimed: "Three generations of imbeciles are enough," the clerk added: "Mr. Justice Butler dissenting."

Liberals
LOUIS DEMBITZ BRANDEIS, 79, dean of the Court in age, still carries more than his share of life work and is one of the outstanding figures in its history.

A crusading Jewish lawyer, Brandeis spent his life mostly in Boston fighting the insurance companies, the railroads, and was appointed to the Court by Woodrow Wilson despite a storm of conservative protest which at one time threatened to block his confirmation.

HARLAN F. STONE, 63, like McReynolds, was "kicked upstairs" from the Attorney Generalship where he had shown too much activity in investigating the Aluminum Trust of his Cabinet colleague, Andrew Mellon.

Stone comes from a background of corporation law and teaching. He was famed as Dean of Columbia Law School and never has lost touch with the scholastic atmosphere.

BENJAMIN NATHAN CAR-

DOZO, 65, springs from a famous Jewish family of English-Portuguese extraction. His great-grand uncle participated as Rabbi at the inauguration of George Washington.

Cardozo came to the Supreme Court after a brilliant and liberal record as Chief Judge of the New York Court of Appeals. He is a bachelor, one of the worst golf players in Washington, and reads Greek and Latin as a recreation.

Middle of the Roaders

Probably it is not with these judges. However, that the final decision in the gold case rests.

If the Court runs true to form, it will be Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts who will tip the scales one way or the other. Frequently they are on the liberal side, but sometimes they are not.

CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES now 72, is the Court's leading exponent of a moderate course. His great aim is to avoid dissenting opinions.

Perhaps the reason for this moderation is the complexity of Hughes' background. In him there appears to be constantly fighting his early crusading liberalism as Governor of New York and his more recent corporation practice when he championed almost every big business client who came his way.

The result is a middle course and the saying among some Court attaches that "you can never tell which way Hughes is going until the last paragraph of his opinion."

OWEN JOSEPHUS ROBERTS, 60, and the baby member of the Court is by training and environment a conservative. Son of moderately well-to-do Philadelphia parents, Roberts represented the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Philadelphia Rapid Transit and led a life which should have made him as reactionary as a Van Devanter or a Sutherland.

But he is not. He has remained aloof and impartial. And it may fall upon him to cast the deciding vote in the gold case.

Cub Defense Tight
Only 137 errors were charged against the Cubs last year, a new record. The old record, 138, was set by the Boston Braves in 1932.

bakers, and took the lead in overruling a Pennsylvania law protecting immigrants from unscrupulous steamship agents.

When Justice Holmes, handing down the majority opinion in the Virginia sterilization of imbeciles case, proclaimed: "Three generations of imbeciles are enough," the clerk added: "Mr. Justice Butler dissenting."

Liberals
LOUIS DEMBITZ BRANDEIS, 79, dean of the Court in age, still carries more than his share of its work and is one of the outstanding figures in its history. A crusading Jewish lawyer, Brandeis spent his life mostly in Boston fighting the insurance companies, the railroads, and was appointed to the Court by Woodrow Wilson despite a storm of conservative protest which at one time threatened to block this confirmation.

HARLAN F. STONE, 63, like McReynolds, was "kicked upstairs" from the Attorney Generalship where he had shown too much activity in investigating the Aluminum Trust of his Cabinet colleague, Andrew Mellon.

Stone comes from a background of corporation law and teaching. He was famed as Dean of Columbia Law School and never has lost touch with the scholastic atmosphere.

BENJAMIN NATHAN CAR-

DOZO, 65, springs from a famous Jewish family of English-Portuguese extraction. His great-grand-uncle participated as Rabbi at the inauguration of George Washington.

Cardozo came to the Supreme Court after a brilliant and liberal record as Chief Judge of the New York Court of Appeals. He is a bachelor, one of the worst golf players in Washington, and reads Greek and Latin as a recreation.

Middle of the Roaders
Probably it is not with these judges, however, that the final decision in the gold case rests.

If the Court runs true to form, it will be Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts who will tip the scales one way or the other. Frequently they are on the Liberal side. But sometimes they are not.

CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES, now 72, is the Court's leading exponent of a moderate course. His great aim is to avoid dissenting opinions.

Perhaps the reason for this moderation is the complexity of Hughes' background. In him there appears to be constantly fighting his early crusading liberalism as Governor of New York and his more recent corporation practice when he championed almost every big business client who came his way.

The result is a middle course and the saying among some Court attaches that "you can never tell which way Hughes is going until the last paragraph of his opinion."

OWEN JOSEPHUS ROBERTS, 60, and the baby member of the Court is by training and environment a conservative. Son of moderately well-to-do Philadelphia parents, Roberts represented the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Philadelphia Rapid Transit and led a life which should have made him as reactionary as a Van Devanter or a Sutherland.

But he is not. He has remained aloof and impartial. And it may fall upon him to cast the deciding vote in the gold case.

Cub Defense Tight
Only 137 errors were charged against the Cubs last year, a new record. The old record, 138, was set by the Boston Braves in 1933.

Dogs Have Topknot

Many dogs of the Mexican hairless variety are crested with a topknot and carry a tuft of hair at the tip of the tail. In others it is bristly and upright. The eyes, lashed, are yellow, hazel or dark, bordered with pink or dark rims. Like that of an impatient race horse, the nervous tremor of the muscles and sinews is characteristic. Not classed for any particular utility, he is considered, however, a good hunter of rabbits and rats. His owners attest that his intelligence, brightness and affection more than repay that tolerance of his unprepossessing appearance.

Many dogs of the Mexican hairless variety are crested with a topknot and carry a tuft of hair at the tip of the tail... in others it is bristly and upright. The eyes, lashed, are yellow, hazel or dark, bordered with pink or dark rims. Like that of an impatient race horse, the nervous tremor of the muscles and sinews is characteristic. Not classed for any particular utility, he is considered, however, a good hunter of rabbits and rats. His owners attest that his intelligence, brightness and affection more than repay that tolerance of his unprepossessing appearance.

WHY HIGH-POWER CARS ARE BUILT

WITH the constant rise in the number of automobile fatalities throughout the country, traceable largely to fast and reckless driving, speculation has grown concerning the reasons for the production of cars that can travel at ninety miles an hour. At the same time there has been a disposition to place upon the manufacturer a measure of responsibility for the mounting death toll because of his persistent advertising emphasis upon speed. Russell Holt Peters, writing in the February Forum, says the manufacturers do not expect drivers to use such speed.

"This sounds absurd," says Mr. Peters, "It isn't, for speed secured through efficient engineering means economy, long life, greater comfort, and, believe it or not, greater safety. Economy results because more efficient design permits you to achieve normal speed with less expenditure of fuel. Longer life is produced because your car is always operating well within its capacity. Greater comfort comes from the absence of strain inherent in under-powered cars. If you have ever driven one of the tiny vehicles England produces to escape exorbitant taxes, you will know exactly what I mean. And latent speed may be invaluable in pulling you out of a tight corner."

All of this is undoubtedly true and the reasons of the manufacturers are probably exactly those given by Mr. Peters. Unfortunately, however, when a producer says a car will go 90 miles an hour, the prospective purchaser considers this statement as something in the light of an invitation to travel at this speed. The factors of economy, comfort and absence of strain do not occupy a large place in his mind if his tendencies are somewhat irresponsible and he is seated behind the wheel of a car which, with a little extra pressure on the gas, will step out at 90.

SCIENCE AND THE CHILD

YOU may fill a child up on bread or some other simple food and satisfy only half his hunger. The other half of his hunger—a "hidden hunger"—will still demand certain vitamins and minerals not found in bread alone, and it becomes a short-sighted economy to reduce the family budget by cutting down on fruits, vegetables and milk.

The advice is that of Dr. S. J. Crumrine, director of public health operations of the American Child Health association. There are other marks of the modern parent and some of them, in Dr. Crumrine's catalogue, are regular medical examinations for children, maximum safeguards against communicable disease, education in line with the child's abilities, encouragement and recognition of responsibility.

It is a different business, the bringing up of children, from what it was a generation or two ago. There is a science to the task of the parent that was not recognized 30 or 40 years ago, and was not respected perhaps so recently as 20 years ago. None but the ignorant scoff at it now, for science is aiding children as well as the rest of mankind.

MALE'S SPRING RAIMENT

THE National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers has decided in convention assembled that there must be a decided change in the general lines of man's apparel. Purple suits and yellow shoes will contribute toward a dashing display next summer and the head of the organization's styles committee insists that "the peacock will look like a weather-beaten awning in comparison with the giddy male."

In the light of past experience, however, we are not disturbed as to the future. For a number of years, the so-called stylists have taken it upon themselves while the snows of January are piled high in field and meadows, highways and mountain-tops, to forecast the attire of man when Spring rolls around.

But nothing startling has happened. The male is fundamentally a conservative creature who clings quite tenaciously to the styles of other years. We feel confident that it will be just about the same in the spring of 1935, when stylists will demonstrate that the head of the styles committee of the National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers is just another prophet without honor.

CHAPTER 31

LEILA COULD not help the sharp cry. It suddenly came to her with violence again that an accepted proposal from Orton meant a well-earned reward to Orton as well as to his mother—until she died. And the Madisons were a long-lived race, unless killed by accident. Grandfather Madison had been rewarded by a doctor's care, and the young man, Grandfather Madison, had been drowned while out in a boat at the age of 60, a year after grandfather had gone where his prohibition for her own good of such sports could not move her. The girls' father had died of pneumonia from a blizzard "which," as Aunt Minnie had always pointed out, "really does not count." Leila felt she could look forward to at least 40 years of Orton and his mother, well cared for as she was sure to be in their hands. She gave the ring a tug and then, unquestionably just what appeared to Orton, Mary Martin in a skin-tight black bikini, tarped him on the shoulder and said brightly, "Hello, you gay old dog, vamping the shirt off somebody as usual!"

"Why, Mary!" said Leila with joy and welcome in her voice. She threw out both hands to Mary in this spasm of welcome. The ring glittered like a headlight of Carter's unquestionable manufacture.

Orton beamed at them both. But Leila, leaving nothing to Orton, said, "Wish us joy, Mary darling!"

"Oh, you poor things, are you settling down?" said Mary swiftly, and then, "But after all, Leila, it really was time."

"Let's see, you and I are both 22. . . I suppose so," sighed Leila sweetly, answering a cat according to her cuteness. At that, Mary discovered she was being signaled for by somebody, and after a scratch or two more went away.

"Poor girl," said Leila continuing to be a cat, "what a pathetically aimless life!"

"Oh, well, she's just a child," said Orton, with that admiration men have shown the good taste to like them. Then he fell to planning.

"What do you think about getting married in the fall? The mater says we really should do more for the social life of the Manor; I suppose she's right. The mater goes a little heavy," said Orton, that butterfly, then maintained slot machines.

This more or less common knowledge of the habits of some members of churches, has resulted in a general lukewarmness in the greatly needed increased support of pastors and preachers. If it be true that church communicants are guilty of the offenses mentioned, it is but additional strong testimony of the awfulness of again legalizing the liquor traffic.

It was expected, naturally, that the old toper would again return to his vomit, and that thousands of the inexperienced young people, out of smartness and curiosity, would be tempted and form the drink habit. But certainly it was not expected that mature adherents of the churches, would not only disregard their religious vows and their influence as exemplars to the young, but put themselves in the unenviable position of being rightly referred to as hypocrites.

Intelligent, self-respecting, consistent and law-abiding men and women will agree that liquor can not be carried on one shoulder and religion on the other. In other words, a man cannot booze, frolic and make "whoopie" and at the same time safeguard the salvation of his soul by being a church member. It just can't be arranged that way.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

COMMENDS MINISTER

Editor Herald:

If the editor of the Daily Herald made no mistake in reporting Rev. Herman Sayre's observation in his sermon on last Sunday in reference to drinking and gambling, it is evidence that at least one pastor in the conference district has the courage of his religious convictions and his obligations to his church and the community.

The statement of the preacher calls to mind a recent conversation with another pastor in a neighboring town who told the writer that a number of the members of his flock, could not be distinguished, from the most worldly of the town who had no connection with the church and made no pretension to religion.

Several of these members, he went on to say, before the repeal, made home brew and since repeal, were frequent visitors at wet restaurants and the liquor store. Others he had been reliably informed, played poker and some of

How Fresh Air Now Is Used In Treatment of Pneumonia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It is still yesterday that the most important element in the treatment of pneumonia is to go to bed as soon as there are any intimations that it has taken hold. There is nothing that is so likely to break down resistance in the face of an infection in the lungs as the attempt to make some people make to walk or off or wear it out by working. It is particularly the successful type of business man, who has had been able to impose his will on an entire organization, who finds he can also bluff Nature, and who often does it to his cost.

Perhaps the most important improvement in our treatment of pneumonia is the method used by our grandmothers is that of the use of fresh air. It took a long time for man to learn that fresh air was a good thing. When it is foggy, cold, even if it is a money and rainy, it is better to have plenty of fresh air than to be shut up tight in a warm room. In fact, I am inclined to believe that the lowering of the incidence of pneumonia is due to the fact that we ventilate our rooms better than we used to, and to the new science of conditioning.

An English practitioner, George Harrison, who shocked all of his hearers and patients and his colleagues by suggesting that people with lung disease should get out in the open air. So great was the opposition to his ideas that he was compelled to treat such patients and take up institutional work. But about the turn of the century his ideas were revived by Dr. Northrup, who established in New York, who put his tables with pneumonia out on the roof, no matter what the weather.

"Why compel a person to take five breaths when three breaths will do?" was the question he asked all critics of his method.

We find today that pneumonia patients certainly get enough fresh air. The sick room of the pneumonia patient, instead of being the stuffy, airtight apartment that it used to be, today discloses the patient in a sweater on the nurse with a sweater and coat and gloves and a woman cap. Sometimes I think we rather overdo it, and that with sick and feeble patients it is not necessary to be quite so strenuous. Certainly when the patient's body must be exposed in order to change the bedclothes and for other purposes, the room should be warmed up to the point of comfort. But under any circumstances, fresh air is a great improvement over the old situation.

A modification, and perhaps an improvement on the use of fresh air, is the oxygen tent which increases the number of atmospheres of oxygen which the patient is breathing. When an oxygen room or tent is available, it should be put in use before the patient is in extreme danger.

In the matter of drugs we have nothing that can be called extremely new. The heart and circulatory system is the most vulnerable point in pneumonia, and when this has come it must be supported. Every physician has his favorite drug in pneumonia, and the fact that he believes in it so implicitly is probably good medicine, as his confidence is communicated to the patient and the family.

It was nothing but a rose I gave her—
Nothing but a rose
Any wind might rob of half its savor,
Any wind that blows.

When she took it from my trembling fingers
With a hand as chill
Ah, the flying touch upon them
Lingers, lingers,
Stays, and thrills them still!

Withered, faded, pressed between the pages,
Crumpled told on fold
Once it lay upon her breast, and ages
Cannot make it old!

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

HERE IS A RECORD TO BEAT

PLAYERS HAVE for years considered holding an entire suit in one hand about the apothecary of rarity, but today we have something rarer in fact, the event is so rare that I never heard it mentioned. I am confident that the hero of the occasion had no idea how rare his accomplishment was, as he did not write to me on the subject, although one of his opponents did so.

On Aug. 17, 1934, C. H. Holmes, Medicine Hat, Alberta, performed the following feat. In eight consecutive deals he bid and made a least game, always at no trumps. Four times he won game, twice he made 4-0-0, once he made 5-0-0 and once he bid and made a small slam. All this may not sound so wonderful. Suppose we calculate the mathematical chances for such an event (or series of like events) to take place.

To arrive at anything like definite facts we must assume the approximate equality of the four players at the table. Then Mr. Holmes had 1 in 4 chances to be the declarer in each case. There are about 500 chances in 1,000 deals that at least one player will hold cards worth a game, it bid and played to the best advantage. There are about 25 chances in 100 for a game hand to be in no trumps, rather than at a suit call.

For Mr. Holmes to be the one to hold a game hand, and that to be in no trumps, on any single specified occasion, the chances were:

4	2	100

which reads 35 chances in 1,000.

If a single event has 35 chances in 1,000 to take place on a given occasion the chances for the event to take place eight times running will be found by multiplying together 35 eight times, then dividing that sum by 1,000 multiplied by itself eight times. The eighth power of 35 is 2,251,875,390,625. In American and French numeration a million is 1,000 thousands, a billion is 1,000 millions, and so on. In English and German numeration a billion is a million millions. The figures here are given in American and French numeration. The eighth power of 1,000 is 1 octillion.

Then there are approximately 2 trillions of chances in 1 octillion, or 1 trillion chances in 500 septillions for Mr. Holmes to have accomplished his feat. This reduces to 1 chance in 500 trillions.

There is 1 chance in 158,753,889,900 to hold an entire suit, or 1 chance in 635,913,559,600 to hold a specified suit entire.

The chances to hold an entire specified suit are approximately 800 times as great as were Mr. Holmes' chances to accomplish what he did. It is no wonder that at least one player at his table thought what happened was worth telling to other players. It may be carried before the event will be duplicated, with four players of about equal skill.

WHY HIGH-POWER CARS ARE BUILT

WITH the constant rise in the number of automobile fatalities throughout the country, traceable largely to fast and reckless driving, speculation has grown concerning the reasons for the production of cars that can travel at ninety miles an hour. At the same time there has been a disposition to place upon the manufacturer a measure of responsibility for the mounting death toll because of his persistent advertising emphasis upon speed. Russell Holt Peters, writing in the February Forum, says the manufacturers do not expect drivers to use such speed.

"This sounds absurd," says Mr. Peters. "It isn't, for speed secured through efficient engineering means economy, long life, greater comfort, and, believe it or not, greater safety. Economy results because more efficient design permits you to achieve normal speed with less expenditure of fuel. Longer life is produced because your car is always operating well within its capacity. Greater comfort comes from the absence of strain inherent in under-powered cars. If you have ever driven one of the tiny vehicles England produces to escape exorbitant taxes, you will know exactly what I mean. And latent speed may be invaluable in pulling you out of a tight corner."

All of this is undoubtedly true and the reasons of the manufacturers are probably exactly those given by Mr. Peters. Unfortunately, however, when a producer says a car will go 90 miles an hour, the prospective purchaser considers this statement as something in the light of an invitation to travel at this speed. The factors of economy, comfort and absence of strain do not occupy a large place in his mind if his tendencies are somewhat irresponsible and he is seated behind the wheel of a car which, with a little extra pressure on the gas, will step out at 90.

SCIENCE AND THE CHILD

YOU may fill a child up on bread or some other simple food and satisfy only half his hunger. The other half of his hunger—a "hidden hunger"—will still demand certain vitamins and minerals not found in bread alone, and it becomes a short-sighted economy to reduce the family budget by cutting down on fruits, vegetables and milk.

The advice is that of Dr. S. J. Crumline, director of public health relations of the American Child Health Association. There are other marks of the modern parent and some of them, in Dr. Crumline's catalogue, are regular medical examinations for children, maximum safeguards against communicable disease, education in line with the child's abilities, encouragement and recognition of responsibility.

It is a different business, the bringing up of children, from what it was a generation or two ago. There is a science to the task of the parent that was not recognized 30 or 40 years ago, and was not respected perhaps so recently as 20 years ago. None but the ignorant scoff at it now, for science is aiding children as well as the rest of mankind.

MALE'S SPRING RAIMENT

THE National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers has decided in convention assembled that there must be a decided change in the general lines of men's apparel. Purple suits and yellow shoes will contribute toward a dashing display next summer and the head of the organization's styles committee insists that "the peacock will look like a weather-beaten awning in comparison with the giddy male."

In the light of past experience, however, we are not disturbed as to the future. For a number of years, the so-called stylists have taken it upon themselves while the snows of January are piled high in fields and meadows, highways and mountain-tops, to forecast the attire of man when Spring rolls around.

But nothing startling has happened. The male is fundamentally a conservative creature who clings quite tenaciously to the styles of other years. We feel confident that it will be just about the same in the spring of 1935, when events will demonstrate that the head of the styles committee of the National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers is just another prophet without honor.

Railroads are planning a half-billion dollar program. Who do they think they are, the government?

In one Chicago ward at the last election votes were bought for twenty-five cents each. The price is shameful.

Civilization, a student of history maintains, is advancing. In view of the fact that the jazz age is behind us, it's impossible to reach any other conclusion.

Looking Back In Pickaway County

CHAPTER 31

LEILA COULD not help the sharp cry. It suddenly struck her with violence again that an accepted proposal from Orton meant being married to Orton—as well as to his mother—until she died. And the Madisons were a long-lived race, unless killed by accident. Grandfather Madison had been removed by a motor car, one of the early ones. Grandmother Madison had been drowned while out in a bathtub at the age of 60, a year after grandfather had gone. Hence his prohibition for her own good of such sports could not move her. The girls' father had died of pneumonia from a blizzard "which," as Aunt Minnie had always pointed out, "really does not count." Leila felt she could look forward to at least 40 years of Orton and his mother, well cared for as she was sure to be in their hands. She gave the ring a tug—and then, unquestionably just what appealed to Orton, Mary Martin in a skin-tight black taffeta tapped him on the shoulder and said brightly, "Hello, you gay old dog vamping the shirt off somebody as usual!"

"Why, Mary?" said Leila with joy and welcome in her voice. She threw out both hands to Mary in this spasm of welcome. The ring glittered like a headlight of Cartier's unquestionable manufacture.

Orton beamed at them both. But Leila, leaving nothing to Orton, said, "Wish us joy, Mary darling!" "Oh, you poor things, are you setting down?" said Mary sweetly, and then, "But after all, Leila, it really was time."

"Let's see, you and I are both 22... I suppose so," sighed Leila sweetly, answering a cat according to her catness. At that, Mary discovered she was being signaled for by somebody, and after a scratch or two more went away.

"Poor girl," said Leila continuing to be a cat, "what a pathetically aimless life!" "Oh, well, she's just a child," said Orton, with that admiration men all have bestowed on girls who have shown the good taste to like them. Then he fell to planning.

"What do you think about getting married in the fall?" The matter was really should do more for the social life of the Manor; I suppose she's right. The matter goes a little heavy," said Orton, but butterfly, on civic duty. We'll give the Manor a few turns when we get back, but we'll pick up an apartment on Park avenue, say around November. Wait a month and you can get a swell cut in the rent. The matter made a mis-take I think in leaving New York in the winter after dad died. Civic duty's all very well, but one owes certain things to oneself."

Leila was silent. The idea of Or-ton, with all his money, planning happily to get his rent cut, struck her dumb. But after all, Jerry would have said that was why the rich stayed rich... She must stop thinking in terms of Jerry!

"We'll get new things of course," he went on, "but Miss Minnie can give us a couple of roomfuls of her antiques. I like antiques. The rooms simply stand empty, there's no reason why she needs all the furniture..."

He began to check over from memory some of the things he thought would look swell; the most cherished of Aunt Minnie's heart, a Well, Orton, after all, would be doing more for her than even the most priceless of antiques were worth, Leila thought.

He then laid out an itinerary for them. It was principally concerned with water polo, though yachting and hunting entered into it, also, more or less. Orton won races, quite often, he proposed to continue.

"That's all we're going to do for 50 years!" "First 50 years are the hardest," joked Orton automatically. "Why, what else would we do?"

"We might improve our characters or our brains or our manners or have careers. We might feel there was something more in the world than cash and social achievement."

"Why, Leila," said Orton in horror, "that sister of yours has been upsetting you, or is it the Redmond fellow?"

It was. Too late she remembered that she had been quoting his very words. Of course she denied it. The itinerary took them well along to the coffee. At the coffee there arrived, sailing down upon them in purple satin, beaming brightly, Leila's prospective mother-in-law. Marriage itself, Leila reflected, could never be more definitely a rite than Mrs. Johnston-Hedges' welcome into the family. It had been not only arranged that Orton should propose to-night, she couldn't help seeing, but his mother had known all about it to the last iota. Leila could only hope she hadn't chosen the ring. And when the sentences of welcome gradually subsided, leaving Leila with the feeling that the Johnston-Hedges caste mark was painted on her forehead, the mother and son proceeded, by their new-found right of possession, to discuss ex-austively the problem of Addison and Bet, and their traitorous action against the privacy of Fernwood Manor's bathing beach, and the pros and cons of Addison's validity as a son of the Hargess Huntingdon, and if so, if he inherited his father's financial intelligence. They hardly thought he did.

"You don't understand," Leila said, feeling her way cautiously. "He's a radical, he doesn't believe in holding property. He hasn't bought it to make money, but as a protest against your shutting the Fernwoods out." "A radical? Of course I know Hargess Huntingdon is a liberal; a man who had very advanced views on profit-sharing and financing his workmen. But I can hardly think he goes so far as this."

"He doesn't. He and his son are completely estranged. He disapproves of him entirely, and Addison seems to hate his father. The money they've used to do this crazy thing is partly some Mr. Redmond loaned him to go west and make a fresh start, and the rest is all the bonds Aunt Minnie and Bet had left."

It put her in the Johnston-Hedges' hands. But after all, she was in their camp now. Their backing as well as their control belonged to her. She sat still, having thrown the bombshell of her news.

When their horror was over they proceeded to see what might be done.

"He can never go on with any sort of development," said Mrs. Johnston-Hedges with obvious satisfaction, "if that is all they could put in it. Can he be holding it for a rise? That sort of thing is so uncertain now."

Get all possible details, Leila dear. Make quite sure he is estranged from his father—one never knows about these financial geniuses. Ah, poor little Minnie, and that wild Bet! Minnie is a beautiful character, but very unworshipful. I think myself she went too far for the sake of marrying Bet off. Somebody might have married her sooner or later."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

COMMENDS MINISTER

If the editor of the Daily Herald made no mistake in reporting Rev. Herman Sayre's observation in his sermon on last Sunday in reference to drinking and gambling, it is evidence that at least one pastor in the conference district has the courage of his religious convictions and his obligations to his church and the community.

The statement of the preacher calls to mind a recent conversation with another pastor in a neighboring town who told the writer that a number of the members of his flock, could not be distinguished, in so far as habits were concerned, from the most worldly of the town who had no connection with the church and made no pretension to religion.

Several of these members, he went on to say, before the repeal, made home-brew and since repeal, were frequent visitors at wet restaurants and the liquor store. Others, he had been reliably informed, played poker and some of them maintained slot machines. This more or less common knowledge of the habits of some members of churches, has resulted in a general lukewarmness in the greatly needed increased support of pastors and preachers. If it be true that church communicants are guilty of the offenses mentioned, it is but additional strong testimony of the awfulness of again legalizing the liquor traffic.

It was expected, naturally, that the old toper would again return to his vomit and that thousands of the inexperienced young people, out of smartness and curiosity, would be tempted and form the drink habit. But certainly it was not expected that mature affiliates of the churches, would not only disregard their religious vows and their influence as exemplars to the young, but put themselves in the unenviable position of being rightly referred to as hypocrites.

Intelligent, self-respecting, consistent and law-abiding men and women will agree that liquor can not be carried on one shoulder and religion on the other. In other words, a man cannot booze, frolic and make "whoopie" and at the same time safeguard the salvation of his soul by being a church member. It just can't be arranged that way.

How Fresh Air Now Is Used In Treatment of Pneumonia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I SAID yesterday that the most important element in the treatment of pneumonia is to go to bed as soon as there are any intimations that it has taken hold.

There is nothing that is so likely to break down resistance in the face of an infection in the lungs as the attempt some people make to walk it off or wear it out by working. It is particularly the successful type of business man, who has always been able to impose his will on an entire organization, who has taken hold. There is nothing that is so likely to break down resistance in the face of an infection in the lungs as the attempt some people make to walk it off or wear it out by working. It is particularly the successful type of business man, who has always been able to impose his will on an entire organization, who has taken hold.

Perhaps the most important improvement in our treatment of pneumonia over the method used by our grandfathers is that of the use of fresh air. It took a long time for man to learn that fresh air was a tonic to the lungs and not a detriment. Even if the air is cold, even if the day is snowy and rainy, it is better to have plenty of fresh air than to be shut up tight in a warm room. In fact, I am inclined to believe that the lowering of the incidence of pneumonia is due to the fact that we ventilate our rooms better than we used to, and to the new science of air conditioning.

It was an English practitioner, George Bodington, who shocked all of his neighbors and patients and his colleagues by suggesting that people with lung disease should get out in the open air. So great was the opposition to his idea that he was compelled to desert treating such patients and take up institutional work. But about the turn of the century his doctrines were revived by Dr. Northrup, children's specialist, in New York, who put his babies with pneumonia out on the roof, no matter what the weather. "Why compel a person to take five breaths when three breaths will do?" was the question he asked all critics of his method.

We find today that pneumonia patients certainly get enough fresh air. The sick room of the pneumonia patient, instead of being the stuffy, air-tight apartment that it used to be, today discloses the patient with a sweater on, a nurse with a sweater and coat and gloves and a woman cap. Sometimes I think we rather overdo it, and that with sick and feeble patients it is not necessary to be quite so strenuous. Certainly when the patient's body must be exposed in order to change the bed-clothes and for other purposes, the room should be warmed up to the point of comfort. But under any circumstances, fresh air is a great improvement over the old suffocation treatment.

A modification, and perhaps an improvement on the use of fresh air, is the oxygen tent which increases the number of atmospheres of oxygen which the patient is breathing. Where an oxygen room or an oxygen tent is available, it should be put in use before the patient is in extreme danger.

In the matter of drugs we have nothing that can be called extremely effective. The heart and circulatory system is the most vulnerable point in pneumonia, and when the time comes it must be supported. Every physician has his favorite drug in pneumonia, and the fact that he believes in it so implicitly is probably good medicine, as his confidence is communicated to the patient and the family.

The Man Who Reclaimed His Head, starring Claude Rains and Joan Bennett, is the picture at the Grand Theatre Friday and Saturday. The picture is startlingly dramatic.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Victor Herbert's immortal "March of the Toys" and "Castle in Spain," as well as the delightful fantasy and story book figures of childhood, have been brought to the screen in a film that should prove a joy and revelation to children and grown-ups.

The picture is the Hal Roach-M-G-M production, "Babes in Toyland," a new feature-length vehicle starring Laurel and Hardy, and opening tonight at the Cliftona Theatre.

The combination of Laurel and Hardy's rollicking comedy with Victor Herbert's pulsating music, added to gorgeously fantastic sets and superb singing, makes a picture that can be enjoyed by anybody, young or old, rich or poor, Indian-chief or candlestick maker.

In this feature, Laurel and Hardy again don costumes that differ from their orthodox baggy suits and derbies. They are two apprentice toy-makers, who in their sincere but wild attempts to get the Widow Peep, who lived in "The Shoe," and her daughter, Bo-Peep, out of the clutches of Toyland's villain, Barnaby, involve themselves in a series of hilarious events that at times turns the operetta into a screamingly funny comedy.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

HERE IS A RECORD TO BEAT

PLAYERS HAVE for years considered holding an entire suit in one hand about the apotheosis of rarity. but today we have something rarer. In fact, the event is so rare that I never heard it mentioned. I am confident that the hero of the occasion had no idea how rare his accomplishment was, as he did not write to me on the subject, although one of my opponents did so.

On Aug. 17, 1934, C. H. Holmes, Medicine Hat, Alberta, performed the following feat. In eight consecutive deals he bid and made a least game, always at no trumps. Four times he won game, twice he made 4-odd, once he made 5-odd and once he bid and made a small slam. All this may not sound so wonderful. Suppose we calculate the mathematical chances for such an event (or series of like events) to take place.

To arrive at anything like definite facts we must assume the approximate equality of the four players at the table. Then Mr. Holmes had 1 in 4 chances to be the declarer in each case. There are about 500 chances in 1,000 deals that at least one player will hold cards worth a game. If bid and played to the best advantage. There are about 25 chances in 100 for a game hand to be in no trumps, rather than at a suit call.

For Mr. Holmes to be the one to hold a game hand, and that to be at no trumps, on any single specified occasion, the chances were:

4 2 100 equals 1, or 0.085, which reads 35 chances in 1,000. If a single event has 35 chances in 1,000 to take place on a given occasion the chances for the event to take place eight times running will be found by multiplying together 35 eight times, then dividing that sum by 1,000 multiplied by itself eight times. The eighth power of 35 is 2,251,875,390,625. In American and French nomenclature a million is 1,000 thousands, a billion is 1,000 millions, and so on. In English and German nomenclature a billion is a million millions. The figures here are given in American and French nomenclature. The eighth power of 1,000 is 1 octillion. Then there are approximately 2 trillions of chances in 1 octillion, or 1 trillion chances in 500 septillions for Mr. Holmes to have accomplished his feat. This reduces to 1 chance in 500 trillions. There is 1 chance in 158,753,389,900 to hold an entire suit, or 1 chance in 65,015,553,600 to hold a specified suit entire. The chances to hold an entire specified suit are approximately 800 times as great as were Mr. Holmes' chances to accomplish what he did. It is no wonder that at least one player at his table thought what happened was worth telling to other players. It may be centuries before the event will be duplicated, with four players of about equal skill.

Bowers Plans Poultry School Monday Evening

The Pinelawn Poultry Farm, Walnut twp., is planning an excellent program for a chick raising school which is to be held at the farm on Monday, evening Feb. 4, for the exclusive benefit of the patrons of the hatchery throughout this territory.

George Bowers, owner of the hatchery, has issued invitations to a large number of poultry raisers to attend school and hear the discussions, and it is probable that more than 100 will be in attendance.

There are two speakers on the program who are known throughout the United States as the greatest specialists in their respective subjects. This is the first of a series of schools planned by Mr. Bowers.

Pinelawn Poultry Farm has been awarded two state certificates, "Ohio Approved" and "All-Ohio Pullorum Safe Plan," and has one pen where individually pedigreed official state record of performance, Ohio State approved males of 325 eggs, are heading.

The program for the school beginning at 6 p. m. is as follows:

Inspection of the plant. Guides will take visitors through. Over shoes are suggested, as shoes must be disinfected before entering pens.

Address, "Chick Raising Conducive to Better Egg Production," G. S. Vickers, field manager Ohio Poultry Improvement association, O. S. U.

"Purpose of School," G. E. Bowers, Pinelawn Poultry Farm.

"Practical Feeding and Management Suggestions," H. Gress-

man, Gressman's Turkey and Poultry and Hatchery, Grove City. "My Experience in Chick Raising," W. H. Hudson, assistant manager Pinelawn Poultry Farm.

"Inherited Diseases of Baby Chicks," Dr. J. T. Burris, Ohio Department of Agriculture, state laboratories, Reynoldsburg.

"How I Control Temperature and Ventilation in the Brooder Houses on Our Farm," E. W. Miller, Miller Poultry Farm, Ashville.

Round-table discussion.

Questions and Answers

Does it make any difference in the results if fish is pan fried in one kind of fat or another? What sort of butters are used if the fish is dipped in egg and crumbs, or some other mixture?

The best medium to use for pan frying in order to obtain a rich, golden-brown color, is a mixture of cooking oil and butter blended in the proportion of two parts of oil to one part of butter. Fats which may be used include cooking oil, lard, butter, olive oil, hydrogenated fats and drippings.

Egg and dry bread crumbs form the best coating for sauteing fish. The natural juices easily are sealed in and an even golden-brown is obtained. Other mediums which may be used include flour, cornmeal, seasoned cracker crumbs, milk and flour, egg and cracker crumbs, and prepared pancake flour.

Could you tell me what foods are rich in minerals? What minerals in particular are essential to health?

Calcium, iron, copper, magnesium and other minerals are very important food elements. They are found in vegetables, fruits, whole grain cereals, nuts, milk and eggs. Copper and iron are found in such organs as liver, kidney and heart. Milk, cheese and cauliflower are especially rich in calcium. Foods most rich in iron include beans, liver, egg yolk and molasses. Phosphorus, also, is an essential mineral, and will be found in the same foods that contain sufficient amounts of calcium and iron.

Do you have a recipe for cream scones? They are served at teas and when entertaining on Sunday night, are they not?

Cream scones are typically served by English and tea drinking people. Here is a recipe:

Cream Scones

Mix and sift: 2 C. flour, 4 tsp. baking powder, 2 tsp. sugar, 1/2 tsp. salt.

Work in with tips of fingers: 4 Tbsp. butter.

Beat well and add: 2 eggs (reserve a small amount of unbeaten white), Add: 1/2 C. cream.

Toss on a floured board, pat, and roll to 3/4-inch in thickness. Cut in squares, brush with reserved egg white, sprinkle with sugar, and bake in a hot oven for 15 minutes.

How soon should a baby's diet include foods other than milk? I am referring to the use of orange juice and tomato juice.

The use of orange juice and tomato juice is usually prescribed by the baby's physician, and 1 teaspoon of orange juice twice a day is usually being given to babies by the end of the 4th week. This juice is diluted in an equal amount of cool boiled water. The amount is gradually increased until the child is getting 1 tablespoon of orange juice (strained of course) twice a day. If tomato juice is used, the quantity should be doubled.

Please give me a recipe for Welsh Rarebit.

Melt 1 Tbsp. butter, add 1 Tbsp. flour and mix the two together until they are well combined. Gradually add 1/2 C. milk, stirring to prevent lumps, and cook until thickened. Add 1/2 pound of cheese and stir until it is melted. Add 1/4 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. mustard, and serve immediately on toast or crackers.

Margaret Caro

Margaret Caro, 17-year-old Spanish girl of Pueblo, Colo., chose prison rather than the love of a man twice her age. Being an orphan, she asked a judge to arrange for her voluntary imprisonment for two weeks, as her lover was so persistent that she could not refuse his proposal of marriage without fear for her safety. The man's love finally cooled and the girl, shown in jail, left her temporary seclusion.

Bowers Plans Poultry School Monday Evening

The Pinelawn Poultry Farm, Walnut twp., is planning an excellent program for a chick raising school which is to be held at the farm on Monday, evening Feb. 4, for the exclusive benefit of the patrons of the hatchery throughout this territory.

George Bowers, owner of the hatchery, has issued invitations to a large number of poultry raisers to attend school and hear the discussions, and it is probable that more than 100 will be in attendance.

There are two speakers on the program who are known throughout the United States as the greatest specialists in their respective subjects. This is the first of a series of schools planned by Mr. Bowers.

Pinelawn Poultry Farm has been awarded two state certificates, "Ohio Approved" and "All-Ohio Pullorum Safe Plan," and has one pen where individually pedigreed official state record of performance, Ohio State approved males of 328 eggs, are heading.

The program for the school beginning at 6 p. m. is as follows: Inspection of the plant. Guides will take visitors through. Over-shoes are suggested, as shoes must be disinfected before entering pens.

Address, "Chick Raising Conducive to Better Egg Production," G. S. Vickers, field manager Ohio Poultry Improvement association, O. S. U.

"Purpose of School," G. E. Bowers, Pinelawn Poultry Farm.

"Practical Feeding and Management Suggestions," H. Gress-

man, Gressman's Turkey and Poultry and Hatchery, Grove City. "My Experience in Chick Raising," W. H. Hudson, assistant manager Pinelawn Poultry Farm.

"Inherited Diseases of Baby Chicks," Dr. J. T. Burris, Ohio Department of Agriculture, state laboratories, Reynoldsburg.

"How I Control Temperature and Ventilation in the Brooder Houses on Our Farm," E. W. Miller, Miller Poultry Farm, Ash-ville.

Round-table discussion.

Questions and Answers

Does it make any difference in the results if fish is pan fried in one kind of fat or another? What sort of batters are used if the fish is dipped in egg and crumbs, or some other mixture?

The best medium to use for pan frying in order to obtain a rich, golden-brown color, is a mixture of cooking oil and butter blended in the proportion of two parts of oil to one part of butter. Fats which may be used include cooking oil, lard, butter, olive oil, hydrogenated fats and drippings.

Egg and dry bread crumbs form the best coating for sautéing fish. The natural juices easily are sealed in and an even golden-brown is obtained. Other mediums which may be used include flour, cornmeal, seasoned cracker crumbs, milk and flour, egg and cracker crumbs, and prepared pancake flour.

Could you tell me what foods are rich in minerals? What minerals in particular are essential to health?

Calcium, iron, copper, magnesium and other minerals are very important food elements. They are found in vegetables, fruits, whole grain cereals, nuts, milk and eggs. Copper and iron are found in such organs as liver, kidney and heart. Milk, cheese and cauliflower are especially rich in calcium. Foods most rich in iron include beans, liver, egg yolk and molasses. Phosphorus, also, is an essential mineral, and will be found in the same foods that contain sufficient amounts of calcium and iron.

Do you have a recipe for cream scones? They are served at teas and when entertaining on Sunday night, are they not?

Cream scones are typically served by English and tea drinking people. Here is a recipe:

Cream Scones

2 C. flour
4 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt

Work in with tips of fingers... 4 Tbsp. butter

Beat well and add... 2 eggs (reserve a small amount of unbeaten white)

Add... 1/2 C. cream

Toss on a floured board, pat, and roll to 3/4-inch in thickness. Cut in squares, brush with reserved egg white, sprinkle with sugar, and bake in a hot oven for 15 minutes.

How soon should a baby's diet include foods other than milk? I am referring to the use of orange juice and tomato juice.

The use of orange juice and tomato juice is usually prescribed by the baby's physician, and 1 teaspoon of orange juice twice a day is usually being given to babies by the end of the 4th week. This juice is diluted in an equal amount of cool boiled water. The amount is gradually increased until the child is getting 1 tablespoon of orange juice (strained of course) twice a day. If tomato juice is used, the quantity should be doubled.

Please give me a recipe for Welsh Rarebit.

Melt 1 Tbsp. butter, add 1 Tbsp. flour and mix the two together until they are well combined. Gradually add 1/2 C. milk, stirring to prevent lumps, and cook until thickened. Add 1/2 pound of cheese and stir until it is melted. Add 1/4 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. mustard, and serve immediately on toast or crackers.

Safe in Jail Cell

Margaret Caro

Margaret Caro, 17-year-old Spanish girl of Pueblo, Colo., chose prison rather than the love of a man twice her age. Being an orphan, she asked a judge to arrange for her voluntary imprisonment for two weeks, as her lover was so persistent that she could not refuse his proposal of marriage without fear for her safety. The man's love finally cooled and the girl, shown in jail, left her temporary seclusion.

ENJOY MORE SUNNY DAYS

Your moods, your actions, your very personality—all are influenced by the state of your health. Avoid common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. This ailment may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. It takes the color out of living.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, a natural laxative food, furnishes you with this needed "bulk." Within the body, it absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN remains effective with continued use. Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Isn't this cereal food better than patent medicines?

ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron. Serve it as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, waffles, etc. It's much more satisfactory than part-bran products. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

BUCKS DEFEAT NOTRE DAME; GEORGE STARS

Score 31-22 With 5,000 Looking On; Bishops' Xavier to Tangle

COLUMBUS, Feb. 1.—Ohio State University's basketball squad today had taken its fourth win in a row by defeating Notre Dame Ramblers, 31 to 22, before a crowd of 5,000 fans last night.

Marty Peters, Ramblers' ace, was held to three points in the second half by Augie George, Buck substitute center from Dayton. Peters made only five points in the first half so his total efforts were worth only eight points.

George not only succeeded in halting Peters but made 10 points of his own to become high scorer of the game. The Bucks led 13 to 10 at the half and never were seriously threatened after George went into the game.

"Tippy" Dye, Pomeroy guard, saw service in the game and scored three points. Capt. Beitter did not see action as Coach Harold Olsen apparently was saving him for the reopening of the Big Ten campaign against Purdue Monday night.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 1.—Coach Glenn Crowe today was to send his Xavier Musketeers through a light, final workout in preparation for the invasion of the Battling Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan here tomorrow night.

Crowe has shifted forward Leo Sisk to a guard position and sent Jack McKenna to the forward post. Sisk is the tallest man in the Xavier squad and at a guard will be available to retrieve the ball following up shots when the play swings to Xavier's territory.

Barnes scored four points and Purcell two.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

BARNES HAS TASK

Jumping Joe Barnes, who handles the pivot point on for the Circleville Athletic club cage team, will have his hands full next Monday evening when the bewhiskered Horse of David team invades the local court. The House of David outfit boasts a center who stands only six feet, nine inches—Hi, Joe.

The Benton Harbor, Mich. team does things in a big way. The team in 1932 won 89 and lost a single fray and last year won 173 and dropped out one, according to Howard Reed, its manager.

SHOULD DRAW CROWD

The House of David outfit is a real attraction, one that should fill the C. A. C. bleachers. When they were here before the House of Davidites drew a large crowd and it is almost certain a big crowd will be on hand to greet them this year. The feature game will start about 8:30 with the Emory club and the Columbus S. A. C. outfits tangling in a preliminary.

The Club lineup will probably include Gordon and Parks, forwards; Barnes, center, and Purcell and Merriman, guards.

GREENO SELLS STALLION

Phil Greeno, Circleville native and widely known horseman, has sold his fast pacing stallion, Corporal Lee, to Harold Curry, of Canada, who plans to place it in stud. The Canadian traveled to Wilmington, where Greeno lives, to see the horse and finding him satisfactory made the deal—Corporal Lee was a great colt pacer, according to the Wilmington News-Journal, winning a long string of races as a two-year-old. He climaxed his two-year-old form by winning the Fox Stake, a futurity for $6,000, in so doing gaining a record at Indianapolis of 2:06 1/2. Greeno has owned the stallion only two years getting him in a trade wherein he sold the fast trotter, Wayne Frisco.

TIGERS TRAVELING

The Tigers are bound for Westerville and a tough basketball game. We hope Coach Frank Ballenger has finally obtained an official who will work the game the way it should be. Usually Ballenger's officials are "homers."

Chases Charley Horse

An Indianapolis physician is said to have almost worked out Out-felder Chuck Klien's charley horse. The muscle knot has been reduced from the size of an indoor baseball to that of a walnut.

CANZONERI WINS; NOW SEEKS ROSS

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—A third shot at Barney Ross for the lightweight championship appeared probable today for Tony Canzoneri after the veteran former titleholder handed Rodak a ten round whipping last night in the Chicago stadium ring.

Superior punching power earned Canzoneri the unanimous verdict of judges and referee Tommy Gilmore. It was Rodak's first beat, iting in 23 professional battles. A crowd of 14,331 saw the fight.

Twice Canzoneri rocked the Chicago youngster with terrific rights that apparently had Rodak on the verge of a knockout. In the second round Rodak reeled under a powerful right to the head delivered in Canzoneri's corner. Again in the sixth a savage right that landed high on the chin made Rodak's knees buckle.

BUCKS DEFEAT NOTRE DAME; GEORGE STARS

Score Is 31-22 With 5,000 Looking On; Bishops-Xavier to Tangle

COLUMBUS, Feb. 1.—Ohio State university's basketball squad today had taken its fourth win in a row by defeating Notre Dame Ramblers, 31 to 22, before a crowd of 5,000 fans last night.

Marty Peters, Ramblers' ace, was held to three points in the second half by Augie George, Buck substitute center from Dayton. Peters made only five points in the first half so his total efforts were worth only eight points.

George not only succeeded in halting Peters but made 10 points of his own to become high scorer of the game. The Bucks led 13 to 10 at the half and never were seriously threatened after George went into the game.

"Tippy" Dye, Pomeroy guard, saw service in the game and scored three points. Capt. Beiter did not see action as Coach Harold Olsen apparently was saving him for the reopening of the Big Ten campaign against Purdue Monday night.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 1.—Coach Clem Crowe today was to send his Xavier Musketeers through a light, final workout in preparation for the invasion of the Battling Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan here tomorrow night.

Crowe has shifted forward Leo Sack to a guard position and sent Jack McKenna to the forward post. Sack is the tallest man in the Xavier squad and at a guard will be available to retrieve the ball or follow up shots when the play swings to Xavier's territory.

The feature games of the county loop this evening finds Ashville traveling to Commercial Point for the annual joust with the Scioto-twp teams.

Joe Barnes and Carl Purcell performed in the Benua League, Lancaster, Tuesday evening, with the Red and White team which lost to Pleasantville, 31-14.

Barnes scored four points and Purcell two.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

BARNES HAS TASK

Jumping Joe Barnes, who handles the pivot position for the Circleville Athletic club cage team, will have his hands full next Monday evening when the bewhiskered House of David team invades the local court—The House of David outfit boasts a center who stands only six feet, nine inches

Hi, Joe

The Benton Harbor, Mich. team does things in a big way—The team in 1932 won 89 and lost a single fray and last year won 173 and dropped out only, according to Howard Reed, its manager

SHOULD DRAW CROWD

The House of David outfit is a real attraction, one that should fill the C. A. C. bleachers—When they were here before the House of Davidites drew a large crowd and it is almost certain a big crowd will be on hand to greet them this year

The feature game will start about 8:30 with the Emery club and the Columbus S. A. C. outfits tangling in a preliminary

The Club lineup will probably include Gordon and Parks, forwards; Barnes, center, and Purcell and Merriman, guards

GREENO SELLS STALLION

Phil Greeno, Circleville native and widely known horseman, has sold his fast pacing stallion, Corporal Lee, to Harold Currier, of Canada, who plans to place it in stud—The Canadian traveled to Wilmington, where Greeno lives, to see the horse and finding him satisfactory made the deal—Corporal Lee was a great colt pacer, according to the Wilmington News-Journal, winning a long string of races as a two-year-old—He climaxed his two-year-old form by winning the Fox Stake, a futurity for $6,000, in so doing gaining a record at Indianapolis of 2:06 1/2—Greeno has owned the stallion only two years getting him in a trade wherein he sold the fast trotter, Wayne Frisco

TIGERS TRAVELING

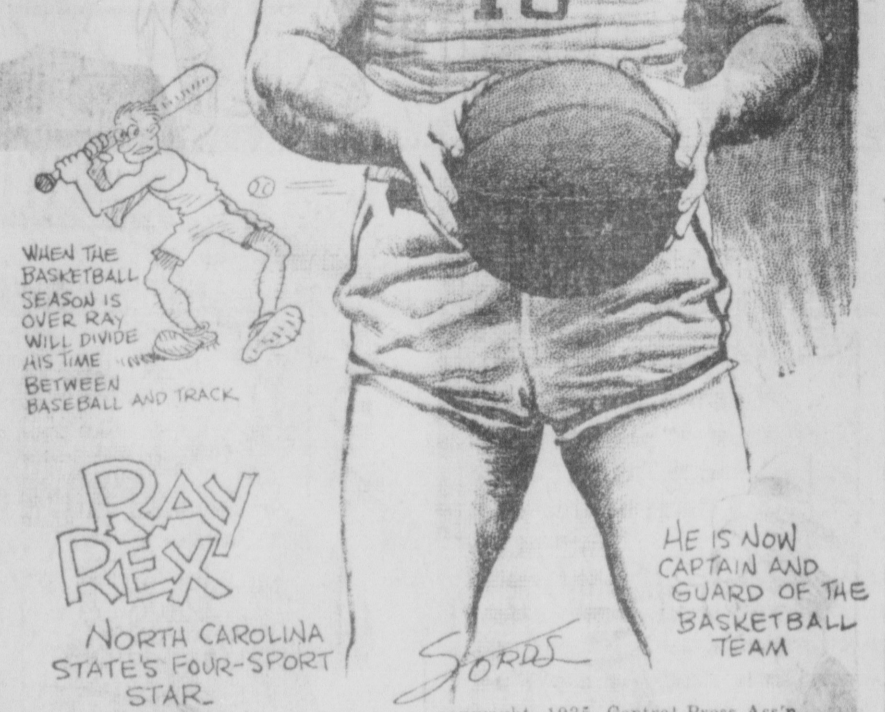

The Tigers are bound for Westerville and a tough basketball game—We hope Coach Frank Ballenger has finally obtained an official who will work the game the way it should be—Usually Ballenger's officials are "homers"

Chases Charley Horse

An Indianapolis physician is said to have almost worked out Out-felder Chuck Klien's charley horse. The muscle knot has been reduced from the size of an indoor baseball to that of a walnut.

SCHMELING, HAMAS IN HAMBURG

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Max Schmelling and Steve Hamas scheduled fight in Hamburg, Germany, March 10, became a certainty today

Charley Harvey, Hamas' manager, had cabled him that the $25,000 guarantee promised Hamas had been posted in the Chase National bank in Paris.

Harvey, Hamas, Trainer Al Thoma and Eddie Harvey, a brother of Charley, will sail for Germany next week.

SHIRES "KAYCED"

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 1.—The irrepressible Arte "Whattaman" Shires was still determined on a ring career today although his initial try at a fistie comeback ended in a second round knockout last night.

Sid Hunter, a Comanche, Tex., heavyweight rapped the former American league first baseman on the chin with a right cross in the second round. Shires went down on one knee to remain until the count of ten was finished.

Whereupon he jumped up to do battle again. He was led away protesting to Referee Ben Bickers.

HYER PLEADS FOR PAYMENT TO VETERANS

Relief Problem Would Be Materially Relieved If Bonus Were Paid, He Says

Why the American Legion wants the immediate payment of the Adjusted Service certificates or so-called "Bonuses" was explained by W. B. "Doc" Hyer, Washington C. H., before the Rotary club at its meeting Thursday noon.

Believing that receipt of amounts due now would bring relief to veterans, many of whom are on county relief lists, it would help alleviate the present relief problem; would give the veterans money to pay their debts and aid materially in permanent recovery were some of the principle reasons given.

"At the present time," he said, the federal government is spending much money for relief and other purposes and some of the money spent is not of much benefit to recovery. By paying the money to the veterans every community will be helped.

He also gave the history of the legislation creating the adjusted compensation in the nature of an endowment policy that is payable in 1945, since it was dated from 1925 and not at the time of the ending of the war in 1918.

He continued by saying that many of the veterans have borrowed on their certificates and are paying interest on the loans made and the Legion believes that this interest charge should be cancelled.

In conclusion he said that the Legion does not have a paid lobby in Washington D. C., and only the national commander and a committee are there working in behalf of the Legion and they are not endorsing any method of payment and will support the bill or bills that the Ways and Means committee recommends for consideration.

While the Legion has a membership of over a million and a half members he asked the support of all citizens in making the immediate payment possible.

Robert Smith attended the meeting and as a new member.

REILLY CLAIMS INTIMIDATION OF WITNESSES

attempted to take the dog from him when he took the animal for a walk.

Under cross-examination, Wilentz forced Kiss to admit the night he dropped in at the bakery he was on a bootlegging mission, that he was on his way to dispose of some of his home-made rum which he used to sell at $1.25 a pint.

August Van Henke, former restaurant man, who used at least two other names, testified that he was the man who met Hauptmann walking with the dog near the Frederickson bakery. Van Henke thought the dog was his missing police dog. He and the man he acc'ted had words but Van Henke finally realized it was not his dog. Before they parted the man gave him a name as Hauptmann, the witness said.

Cross examined by Wilentz, Van Henke sought to deny the restaurant he had run was a speakeasy. He admitted, however, that his place had been raided several times.

Lon Harding, of Trenton, N. Y., a laborer, who said he saw two men in an automobile containing a ladder and that they asked him the direction to the Lindbergh estate. He was working near Princeton N. J. at the time. He said he got a good look at the men and neither of them was Hauptmann. He said the day after the kidnaping he went to the Lindbergh home and saw the same ladder leaning against the house.

Under cross examination, Harding admitted he had a police record for such crimes as assault and battery and rape.

REILLY UNCONCERNED

Edward J. Reilly, chief counsel for the defense, professed to be unconcerned about the efforts of the state to discredit his witnesses. He said the main fact is not what the past of these witnesses might disclose. He declared the important thing is that they stuck to their testimony alibing Hauptmann on the night of the crime. Reilly insists the state has not put Hauptmann in New Jersey.

"Friction Fighters" FIND NEW WAY TO REFININE OIL that is making Millions of Cars start Easier this Winter

Now CIRCLEVILLE
MOTORISTS can get this new economy and protection afforded by Refining's latest advance!

WISE MOTORISTS the country over are already enjoying easier driving and new savings with this different, far better, winter oil! When you read the story of its new refining method you'll see why!

It's a story that points the way to definite savings on oil bills. It shows how you can cut the cost of repairs and engine upkeep.

Oil has to be refined to take out natural impurities that are found in every kind of crude.

Now Socony-Vacuum has discovered a new and much better way to refine oil. We call it the Clearosol Process. By this new method we actually dissolve out the useless elements—just as soap and water dissolves dirt!

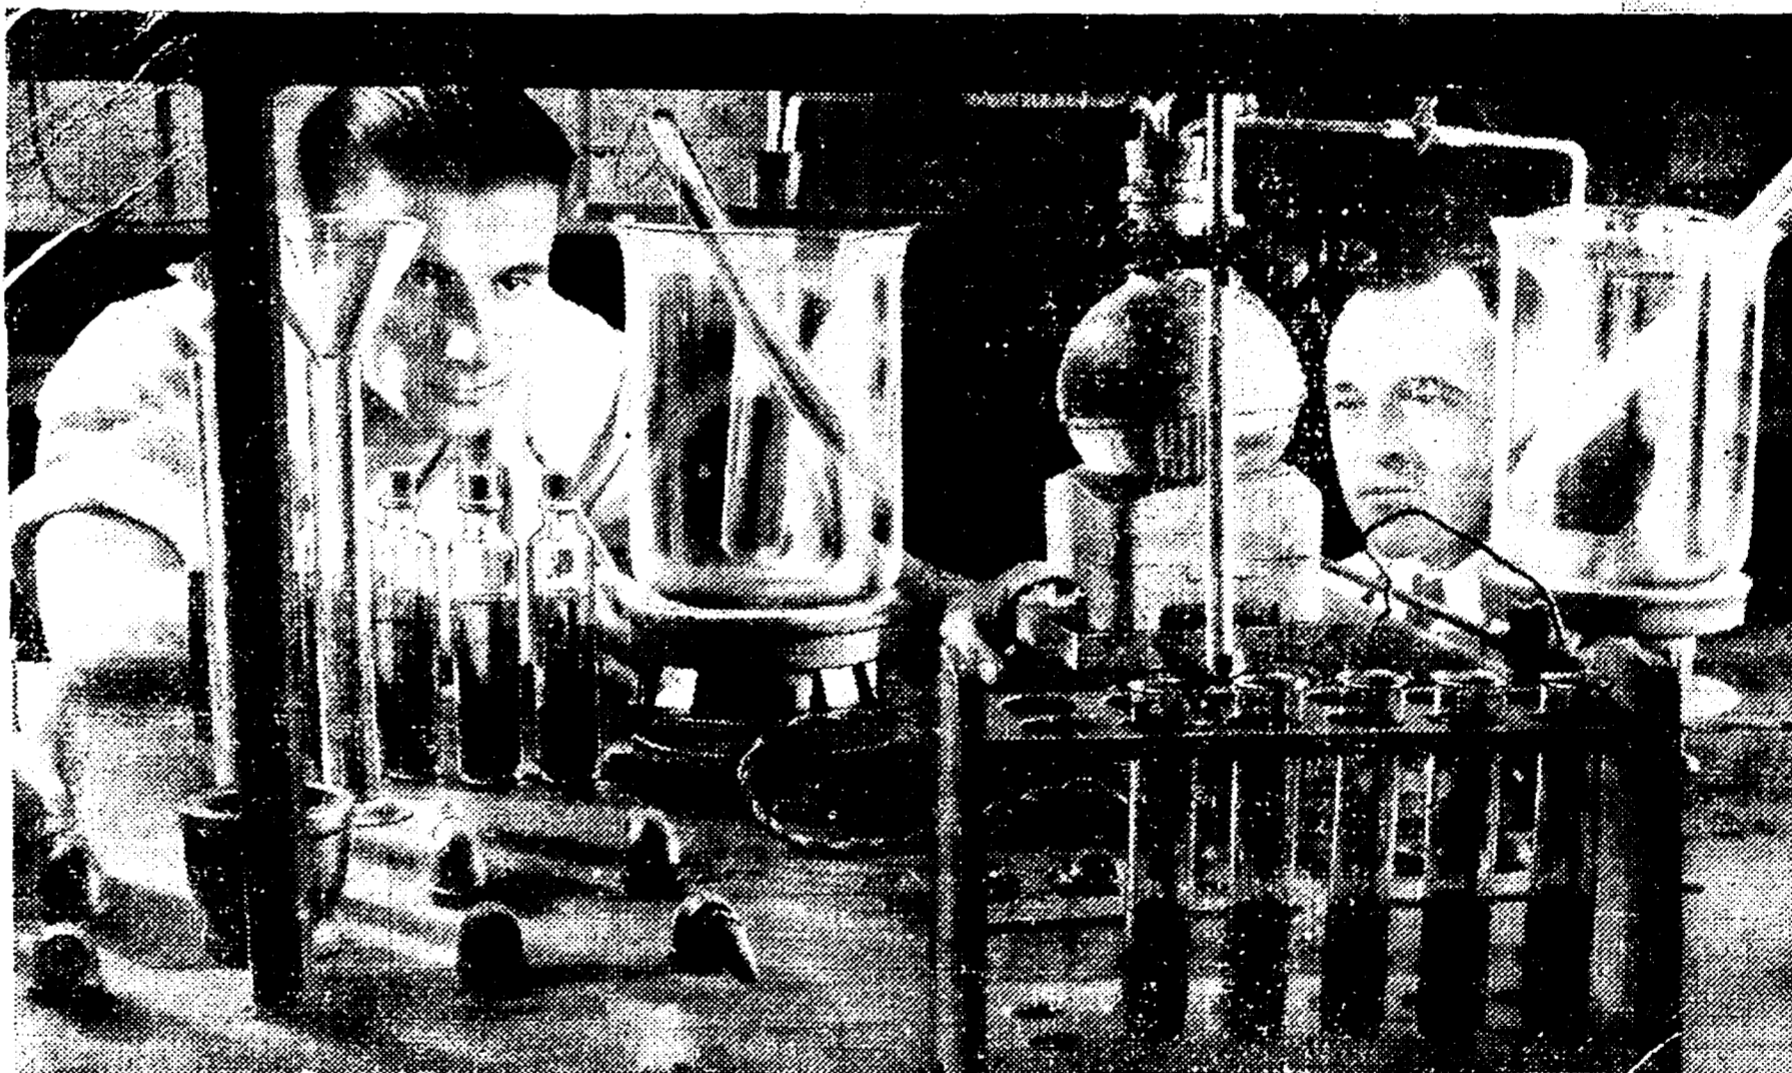

The results are really amazing.

Because tarry waste elements are gone, Winter starting is made much easier. You start faster with less drag on your battery, less strain on your engine.

Because this oil is practically 100 per cent pure lubricant—you use far less.

Because this oil is cleaner—no gum, no sludge is deposited in your engine by Mobiloil Arctic.

Why Mobiloil Arctic—made by the Socony-Vacuum Clearosol Process—makes cold weather starting easier, lasts much longer, protects cars better against Winter.

This new Mobiloil Arctic flows readily at sub-zero temperatures—quickly protecting all parts of the engine. Yet it is so heat-resistent that it stays on the job no matter how hot your engine gets.

With all this extra performance, you might expect a higher price. But the price has not been advanced a single cent. You pay no more than you have been paying for Mobiloil.

Drive in today and let us check your oil to make sure your engine is getting the protection it needs. Let us show you how the new Mobiloil Arctic can save you time, trouble and money these cold winter days.

HYER PLEADS FOR PAYMENT TO VETERANS

Relief Problem Would be Materially Relieved If Bonus Were Paid, He Says

Why the American Legion wants the immediate payment of the Adjusted Service certificates or so-called "Bonus" was explained by W. B. "Doc" Hyer, Washington C. H., before the Rotary club at its meeting Thursday noon.

Believing that receipt of amounts due now would bring relief to veterans, many of whom are on county relief lists, it would help alleviate the present relief problem; would give the veterans money to pay their debts and aid materially in permanent recovery were some of the principle reasons given.

"At the present time," he said, the federal government is spending much money for relief and other purposes and some of the money spent is not of much benefit to recovery. By paying the money to the veterans every community will be helped.

He also gave the history of the legislation creating the adjusted compensation in the nature of an endowment policy that is payable in 1945, since it was dated from 1925 and not at the time of the ending of the war in 1918.

He continued by saying that many of the veterans have borrowed on their certificates and are paying interest on the loans made and the Legion believes that this interest charge should be cancelled.

In conclusion he said that the Legion does not have a paid lobby in Washington D. C., and only the national commander and a committee are there working in behalf of the Legion and they are not endorsing any method of payment and will support the bill or bills that the Ways and Means committee recommends for consideration.

While the Legion has a membership of over a million and a half members he asked the support of all citizens in making the immediate payment possible.

Robert Smith attended the meeting and as a new member.

attempted to take the dog from him when he took the animal for a walk.

Under cross-examination, Wilentz forced Kiss to admit the night he dropped in at the bakery he was on a bootlegging mission, that he was on his way to dispose of some of his home-made rum which he used to sell at $1.25 a pint.

2.—August Van Henke, former restaurant man, who used at least two other names, testified that he was the man who met Hauptmann walking with the dog near the Fredericksen bakery. Van Henke thought the dog was his missing police dog. He and the man he acc'ted had words but

Van Henke finally realized it was not his dog. Before they parted the man gave his name as Hauptmann, the witness said.

Cross examined by Wilentz, Van Henke sought to deny the restaurant he had run was a speakeasy. He admitted, however, that his place had been raided several times.

3.—Lou Harding, of Trenton, N. Y., a laborer, who said he saw two men in an automobile containing a ladder and that they asked him the direction to the Lindbergh estate. He was working near Princeton N. J. at the time. He said he got a good look at the men and neither of them was Hauptmann. He said the day after the kidnaping he went to the Lindbergh home and saw the same ladder leaning against the house.

Under cross examination, Harding admitted he had a police record for such crimes as assault and battery and rape.

REILLY UNCONCERNED

Edward J. Reilly, chief counsel for the defense, professed to be unconcerned about the efforts of the state to discredit his witnesses. He said the main fact is not what the past of these witnesses might disclose. He declared the important thing is that they stuck to their testimony alibing Hauptmann on the night of the crime. Reilly insists the state has not "put Hauptmann in New Jersey."

FIND NEW WAY TO REFININE OIL

that is making Millions of Cars start Easier this Winter

Now CIRCLEVILLE
MOTORISTS can get this
new economy and protection
afforded by Refining's latest
advance!

WISE MOTORISTS the country over are already enjoying easier driving and new savings with this different, far better, winter oil! When you read the story of its new refining method you'll see why!

It's a story that points the way to definite savings on oil bills. It shows how you can cut the cost of repairs and engine upkeep.

Oil has to be refined to take out natural impurities that are found in every kind of crude. Now Socony-Vacuum has discovered a new and much better way to refine oil. We call it the Clearsol Process. By this new method we actually dissolve out the useless elements—just as soap and water dissolves dirt!

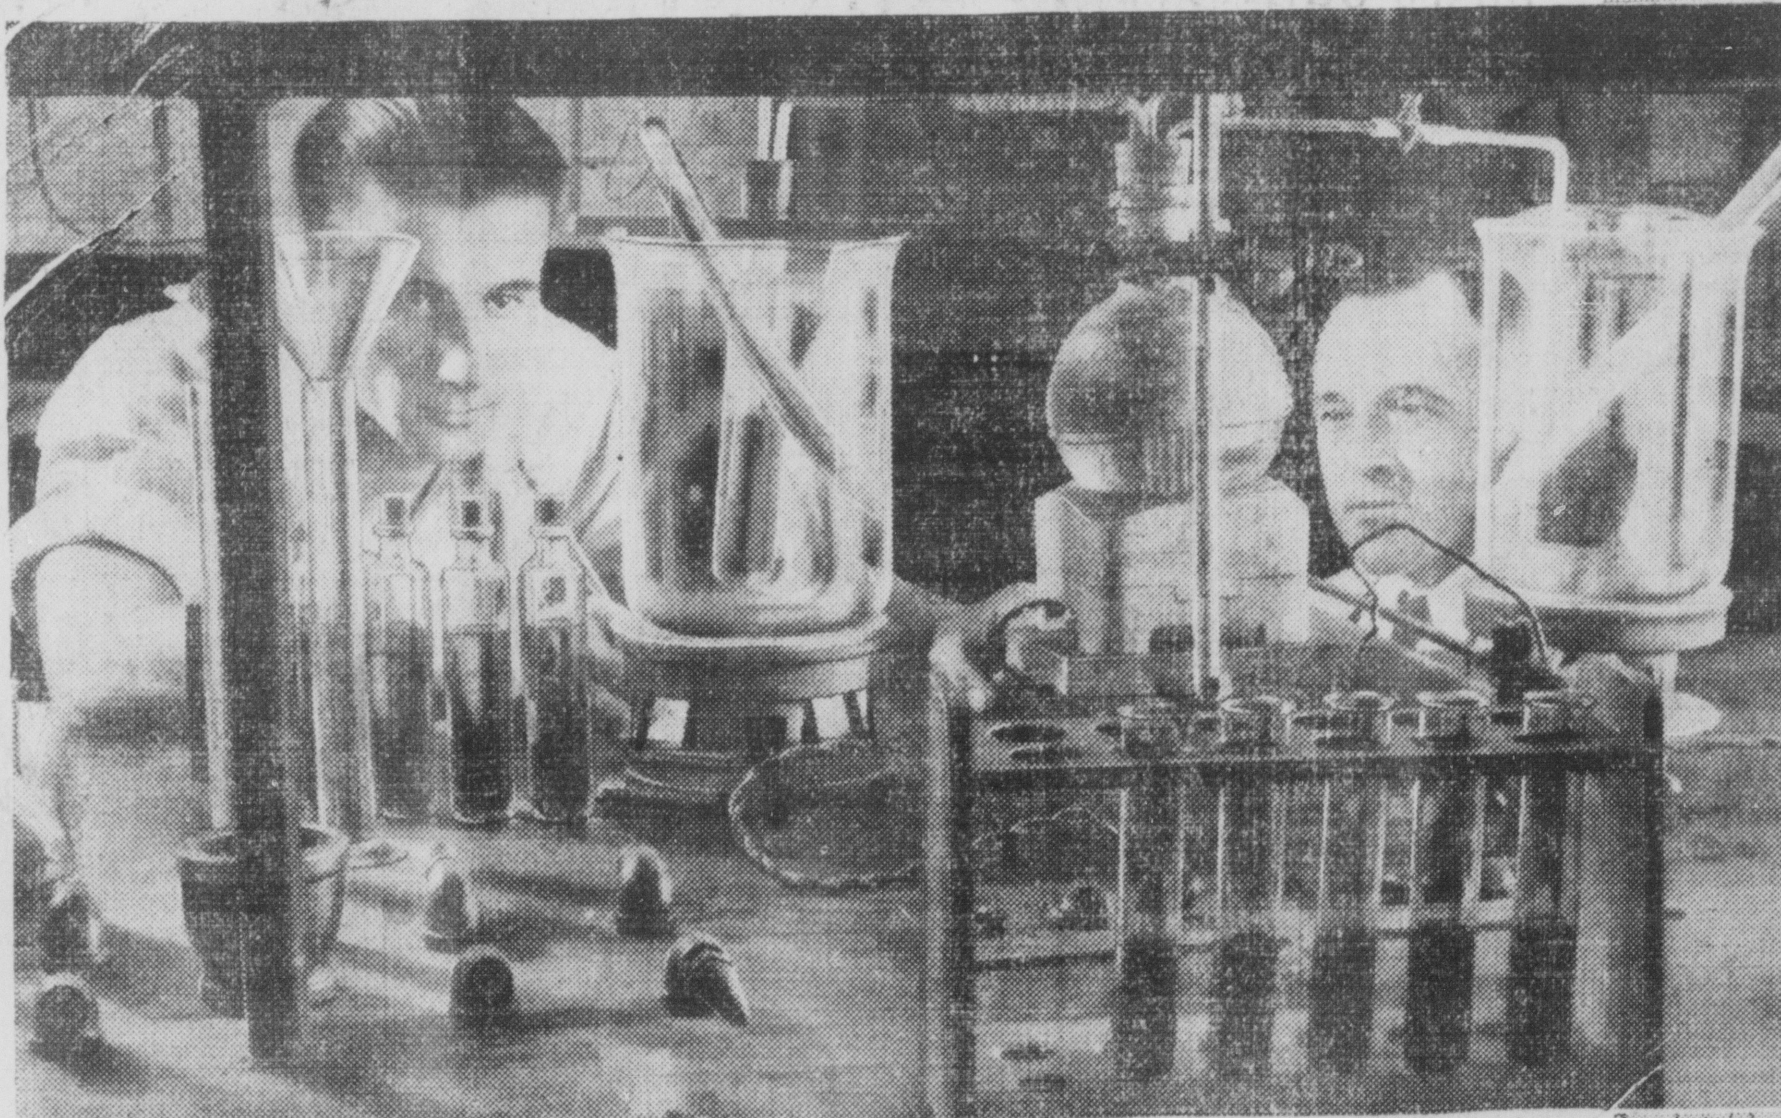

The results are really amazing.

Because tarry waste elements are gone, Winter starting is made much easier. You start faster with less drag on your battery, less strain on your engine.

Because this oil is practically 100 per cent pure lubricant—you use far less.

Because this oil is cleaner—no gum, no sludge is deposited in your engine by Mobiloil Arctic.

Why Mobiloil Arctic—made by the Socony-Vacuum Clearsol Process—makes cold weather starting easier, lasts much longer, protects cars better against Winter.

This new Mobiloil Arctic flows readily at sub-zero temperatures—quickly protecting all parts of the engine. Yet it is so heat-resistant that it stays on the job no matter how hot your engine gets.

With all this extra performance, you might expect a higher price. But the price has not been advanced a single cent. You pay no more than you have been paying for Mobiloil.

Drive in today and let us check your oil to make sure your engine is getting the protection it needs. Let us show you how the new Mobiloil Arctic can save you time, trouble and money these cold winter days.
